

Herm, Sark and Alderney

Island Hopping

Experience Island hopping in the English channel! Guernsey serves as the hub for departures by sea and air to the beautiful islands of Herm, Sark & Alderney.

Herm

A tranquil beach paradise that's easily reached from Guernsey by ferry, Herm is a favourite with visitors and locals alike. As soon as you step off the boat onto the jumble of granite and wood that forms the harbour wall, the stresses of the modern world evaporate. Stay overnight to really appreciate the peaceful personality of this magical island. Highlights are Belvoir Bay – a secluded cove surrounded by beautiful scenery, Shell Beach – brilliant white sand like in the Caribbean! And the beautiful Coastal walk starting from the harbour where you can Puffin spot!

Sark

Step back in time in beautiful Sark. Traffic-free and overflowing with natural beauty, the island is easily reached by ferry from Guernsey. Stunning coastal views and a picturesque rural interior are best experienced either on foot or by bicycle (available for rent on the island). There are also a number of good restaurants and hotels for those wishing to stay longer than a day. Highlights are La Seigneurs of Sark with its beautiful gardens; La Coupee a spectacular sight with its razor edged isthmus that joins the main island to little Sark and Venus pool perfect for bathing at 20 feet deep!

and Alderney

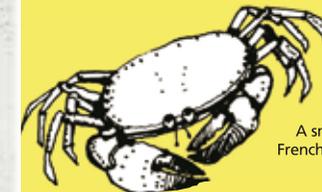

Despite being the closest to France, Alderney feels more remote than any of the other Channel Islands. It's a paradise for nature lovers, a combination of landscapes and wildlife that are easily accessible from Guernsey by air or sea. There are over 30 miles of walks that wind their way over cliffs and golden bays, across exposed commons, past Victorian fortresses and World War II batteries alongside the scenic golf course.

Alderney

St Annes the capital is a community of colour washed houses, cobbled streets and shops and the magnificent 'Cathedral of the Channel Islands' at its centre. There are many welcoming pubs and restaurants on the island and there's even a gauge railway (the only one in the channel islands). Highlights are: Bird watching – home to almost 300 species of bird and includes 2% of the worlds gannet population; Beaches – some of the sandiest beaches – Branve and Longis being the most popular.

So close. So different.

A small slice of Britain with French dressing, that's Alderney.
