

Simply a matter of taste!

Jersey is fast becoming a gastronomic destination in its own right. With more than 200 restaurants across the island you'll find everything from beach cafés to bistros and gastropubs to gourmet dining, all with a tempting array of first class cuisine using quality local produce.

The island is home to the Jersey cow and Jersey potato allowing the modern French cosmopolitan life to sit well with the island's farming heritage and history.

Don't leave without trying the seafood.

The warm local waters are teeming with life and locally caught turbot, bream and bass feature on most menus, along with lobster, chancre crab, scallops and mussels and last but not least the locally farmed Royal bay oysters of Grouville.

The Channel Islands mark the northern limit of the rare maritime snail - the ormer - from the French 'oreille de mer' (ear of the sea). The ormer is harvested from September to April and only on the first day of the full moon and for the following three days to preserve stocks. Superb cooked in the oven as a cassoulet or served with gravy onions and carrots!

Sample the fine food everywhere; at restaurants, local markets, food events and festivals, it's all simply a matter of taste...
